There are a number of laws governing powers of attorney which can make determining whether to accept any given power of attorney difficult. One of the main concerns is the extent of the rights of financial institutions when it comes to relying on a power of attorney.

During this Webinar we will discuss the scope of an attorney-in-fact's authority to act as well as the protections afforded a financial institution when accepting a power of attorney. We will even address whether an institution can accept a copy of a power of attorney if the original is not available. Also, what if there are concerns over whether the principal is incapacitated, yet the power of attorney is not durable? How is the principal's incapacitation even determined?

Join us at this Webinar as we consider these topics as well as other common questions, all in an attempt to help financial institutions make informed business decisions when presented with powers of attorney.

Topics of Discussion

- Laws governing powers of attorney
- Legal sufficiency considerations
- Accepting or rejecting powers of attorney
