RESPA Section 8 Update: What Not to Do

Section 8 of RESPA prohibits a lender or other party from paying or receiving a fee or other thing of value for the referral of a mortgage loan. Kickbacks and unearned fees are also prohibited. In contrast, paying for bona fide services is allowed. There is a tension between these provisions. Marketing services agreements between mortgage lenders and realtors or other settlement-service providers have long been subject to scrutiny but never more so than now. The CFPB issued guidance in 2015 warning supervised lenders to be careful about making payments for “marketing services” when the person performing the marketing services has also referred mortgage business to the lender. The Bureau showed it meant business in its recent enforcement actions taken against Prospect Mortgage, ReMax and related parties in California. This month’s telephone briefing will include a recap of the basic prohibitions of Section 8 and a detailed discussion of “what not to do” in light of the Prospect Mortgage cases.

CFPB Proposes Clarifications to Regulation C 2015 Final Rule

For more than a year, lenders have been gearing up for complying with the amendments to Regulation C, which implements the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act (HMDA), that were adopted by the CFPB in October 2015. While the 2015 Final Rule is being phased in over the next few years, the majority of the amendments take effect as of January 1, 2018. As with any major overhaul to a regulation, many questions have been raised as to just what the amended regulation requires. Recognizing that the massive revisions made to Regulation C have caused confusion for many lenders, on April 25, 2017 the CFPB issued a proposal that is intended to clarify certain requirements of the regulation and to make some technical corrections. 82 FR 19142. During this month’s briefing, we will discuss the more significant aspects of the Bureau’s proposed clarifications. Please join us as we walk through the CFPB’s new Reg C proposal.
